

What to Record Before Your First Production Deal

A template for producers, artists, and families entering a first production agreement.

WHY THIS MATTERS

The most common creative-production disputes start with what nobody wrote down. Before work begins, producers and artists should agree on scope, credit, ownership, payment, and delivery - in writing. This template keeps the conversation to one page and makes the next session productive.

WHAT'S INSIDE

- Parties: legal names, not stage names or handles
- Scope: recordings or beats, deliverables, and how many revisions are included
- Credit: how each side is credited in titles, metadata, and social posts
- Ownership: who owns the master and the underlying composition rights
- Payment: amounts, timing, and what event triggers each payment
- Delivery: file formats, stems, masters, and deadlines

ABOUT JAYLEN SINEGAL

Jaylen Sinegal is an executive brand strategist and media IP consultant in Louisiana. He teaches athlete and family brand architecture, NIL and music licensing to schools, and media copyright and facility audits. He is Chief Brand Officer of FlightTime Athletics LLC and builds the Find a Producer director for Louisiana music.

A STANDING PROMISE

Education, not representation. Jaylen Sinegal provides brand strategy, media education, and IP consulting. He is not a licensed sports agent and does not solicit, negotiate, or procure athletic contracts, sponsorships, or employment. He does not sell, license, or represent music. Families, schools, and buyers keep direct control of their own assets.

This resource is educational material meant to help you ask better questions. It is not legal, tax, financial, or investment advice, and it is not a contract. Louisiana law, platform terms, and school rules change. Confirm the current rules for your situation and have a qualified attorney review final documents whenever money, minors, or contracts are involved.

If this resource references an organization, platform, or law (including Louisiana Act 810 and La. R.S. 51:2500 et seq.), it is a plain-English overview, not the authoritative text. Read the actual statutes and terms before relying on any checklist.
