

Why Your Highlight Got Muted: Music Rights for Sports Rec

Game footage is yours. The music on top of it is a separate question.

WHY THIS MATTERS

Your game footage belongs to you. The song you edit onto it does not come with your footage. Music is the most common reason highlight reels get muted, blocked, or taken down on YouTube, Hudl, TikTok, and X. This one-pager explains the two rights that matter in plain English - master and sync - why that red 'banned' banner appears, and how to post highlights without giving the platform a reason to yank them.

WHAT'S INSIDE

- Why highlights get muted: unlicensed music is the #1 trigger across YouTube, Hudl, TikTok, and X
- Master = the recording you (or a label) own; sync = permission to pair any song with moving video
- Buying or streaming a song does not grant sync rights - using it over your film still needs a license
- The mute or banned outcome: platforms may mute, block, remove, or claim revenue on flagged footage
- Safe edits: your own footage, voiceover, commentary, and royalty-free or properly licensed music
- The playbook: choose one of these safe audio paths before you ever drop a highlight this season
